Several years ago, it never came to my mind that I would enter the graduate school and study foreign literature as my major. Never did I imagine one day I could complete a nearly-one-hundred-page thesis like this one in the course of education. Now the moment comes; the moment to examine what I have learned in the past three years, the moment to demonstrate the result of immersing myself in the field of literature, the moment to place a milestone through this thesis in my life. After undergoing numerous unanticipated difficulties, I am proud to say I made it!

There are many teachers to whom I should express my gratitude sincerely. The first one I am most obliged to is my advisor, Professor Chien-chi Liu, who particularly takes care of me both in curricular and extracurricular respect. Without his professional guidance and constant concern, I could never overcome those obstacles that used to upset me and finish a torturous thesis eventually. I am also indebted to Professor Tsui-fen Jiang, who pulls me out of the abyss of despair by agreeing to be one of my committee members in time and who scrutinizes my thesis as carefully as my advisor did. The other committee member I am grateful to is Professor Kuan-jung Cheng, who first broadened my knowledge of literature in his literary criticism class when I was in college and who could always resolve my puzzle in a few words. In Chengchi University, my greatest appreciation is reserved for Professor Rachel Juan, whom I have worked for as her personal assistant for three enjoyable years. Besides, I would like to thank two teachers in ChungHsing University, where I had a wonderful, unforgettable time of study in my college life. My special thanks go to Professor Jieh-hua Ch'en, who is the first one encouraging me to go to graduate school, and Professor Pi-ling Tsay, who often gives me much valuable and timely advice as a friend.

More importantly, I could never acquire this M.A. degree without the financial and spiritual support of my family, especially my parents, to whom I dedicate this thesis.

Although working oversea, my dad, Joseph, always shares everything with me at midnight whenever he comes back and never pushes me when I face the bottleneck in schoolwork. My mom, Carol, takes care of me so thoroughly that I can concentrate on thesis-writing without worrying about anything trivial. After accepting my parents' unremitting love and support from the cradle to the present, I am ready to take the responsibility of having them live an easy and worriless life from now on. Also, I would like to extend my heart-felt thanks to my grandparents, who keep on being concerned about me and informing me some invaluable experiences of life.

There are many friends I would like to thank in the process of my study for their irreplaceable friendship that helps me surmount all the problems. Special thanks and love go to my little group, including Sunny, Brenda, Beryl, Gus, and Ben. In the past three years, Sunny has been my best friend, who makes my life meaningful through her unselfish love. Brenda is my best consultant, with whom I can freely discuss problems and share secrets. Beryl, Gus, and Ben enriched the boring life of M.A. program by sharing gossips in our once-a-month dinner appointments. I especially want to thank Zoe for guiding me with her academic as well as professional knowledge. My particular thanks go to Jennifer, who often helped me a lot when I worked in the department office. Also, I owe a lot to Nico, whose encouragement warms my heart all the time. Last but not least, I would like to thank Kumo for her timeless friendship and thank Denise for her everlasting consideration.

As I grow up, faced with more and more responsibilities, I gradually realize what the old song "That's What Friends Are For" expresses. No man is a lonely island. Accompanied by those who love me, I am confident of doing anything. This is how this thesis is accomplished.
