My warmest thanks first go to Dr. Hsin-ling Wang, whose guidance, patience, and tolerance make this thesis possible. I took Dr. Wang's course two years ago. In her class, I always made presentations in the form of variety show, like puppet show, magic show, or role-playing as an anchor, a cook, or a balloon-sculpturer, etc. On one hand, I really indulged myself in this festive atmosphere. On the other, I was afraid that I would overplay and Dr. Wang might say, "Stop. It's enough," someday. However, she was always tolerant of me and even took pictures of my "performance." I am really grateful to her generosity. When I decided to write the thesis about Chaucer from the perspective of game, I was very nervous to ask her if she could be my advisor, because I knew she had already been my classmate's advisor. Besides, she had to take care of her mother in the hospital. I worried that she would be very busy. To my surprise, she promised to be my advisor without hesitation. At that moment, I was very touched and delighted. I owe my warmest thanks to her, again. In the process of writing this thesis, I also accepted many timely helps from her. She provided me with precious periodicals and suggestions. For example, in the first chapter, I prefer to use big words, but I gradually try to write in a clear style in the following chapters. I think her advice is really helpful, because clarity is indeed more important than purple patch. I am also thankful to her because she corrected my thesis very carefully over and over again. She is also very considerate. She used to make cookies for everybody in the Department office during the Eastern days. This time, when I turned in chapter two, she made some cookies for me, too. I am so lucky to have Dr. Wang be my advisor.

I am also obliged to my committee members, Dr. Chien-chi Liu and Dr.

Wei-hsin Tien, who carefully scrutinize my thesis in the hot summer. I took Dr. Liu's course two years ago. Originally, the student number achieved the maximum and I could not log in, but Dr. Liu was so generous to let me in. I am really thankful to him. He is an earnest and good teacher, who always inspires students and corrects papers carefully. He recommends the best and must-read classical theories to students. He is also very considerate. Afraid that students could not realize the theories at the first sight, he also gave us many digested materials to help us understand the authors' intentions better. We learned a lot in his class, which is a harvest journey. I want to apologize to him because I did not perform very well in my presentation in his class. If time could return, I would study much more earnestly and do my best to perform well. I also want to express my special thanks to Dr. Tien, whose contributions to the generations after him are beyond words. To take myself for example, I read his essays on American literature so as to pass the graduate examination. Were it not for his clear and detailed introduction, I could get lost in the labyrinth of American literature. He also provided me with some insightful suggestions during the oral defense. For instance, he reminded me that Bakhtinian carnivalization should happen in the group "of the same kind." It was not until his explanation that I came to realize Bakhtin's original meaning.

I want to express my thanks to Tina as well. She always keeps me company and inspires me with wonderful idea. When I wrote chapter four, I was once stuck. My brain got jammed for hours. I told her that I was discussing the Nun's Priest's style of digressive narration for a small part, but I got stuck. After hearing that, she answered in one sentence, "Maybe he does not tell the tale for the first time." Upon hearing this sentence, I knew what she wanted to say and I seemed to be baptized by the salvation. Inspiration pours me ever after. I also have to thank her for checking the MLA form meticulously. If there is still any form mistake, it is my fault. With her company, I did not feel alone or frustrated during the process of writing this thesis. She lights up my life, makes me complete, and makes me want to be a better man.

I also owe a lot to my senior, Yi-feng Chang, who let me use his computer when mine was out of order. Without his timely help, I would have to finish my thesis in the cyber café. Besides, when I wanted to take a break, he always provided me with abundant repertoire of films, which were good cure-alls.

Special thanks are given to Andre Kole, the renowned magician, or, illusionist, in America. He is the original inventor of “the disappearing of the Liberty Statue.” Originally, I wanted to write a thesis about Bible from the perspective of magic. I wanted to find trace in Bible to prove what Jesus did was not magic, but miracles. I wrote an e-mail asking for Kole’s professional help. He is so generous that he immediately sent me his two books and one note. Unfortunately, later I decided to give up the project because the materials in Taiwan are not enough to support my argument. However, I still quote one passage (about magicians) from his book in this thesis. Anyway, I owe him a big favor.

I also want to thank Dr. Yuen-mei Yin and Dr. Andrew Rathmann, for whom I work. They are very kind and treat me very well. I also want to thank Betty, who is like my senior, taking care of me. I have to thank my classmate, Josepheus, too. He told me that there was a book which I might need in the library.

Last but not least, I want to express my deepest thanks to my grandparents and mom, to whom my thesis is dedicated. For the past seven years, my grandparents have paid all the tuitions for me. They have been taking great care of me since I was a child. I love them so much. My mom, who is a nagging yet good-willing woman, took the heavy burden to take care of me since I was a baby. She stood all the pains to brought me up, which is a Herculean task. I love her so much, too.

There are so many people to thank; therefore, thank God!

I like to play.
