ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This is a great opportunity to express the appreciation to many people who have assisted me in the completion of this thesis. I am very grateful to my advisor, Prof. Kawai Chui, for leading me into the areas of semantics, gesture, and discourse analysis, and for her valuable comments, enthusiasm and encouragement. I benefited much from her profound knowledge in linguistics. My gratitude is also extended to Prof. Hui-chen Chan and Prof. Hsueh-o Lin for their insightful and thoughtful opinions and suggestions, which have helped me to rethink some aspects of my analysis in the current study.

I thank the National Science Council. The data analyzed in this thesis is from Prof. Chui's projects under grants NSC 94-2411-H-004-031 and NSC 95-2411-H-004-008. I also wish to thank Michael Kipp for providing the Anvil software to help me annotate gesture.

In addition, I owe many debts of gratitude to the faculty members me at the Graduate Institute of Linguistics: Prof. One-Soon Her, Prof. Yuchau E. Hsiao, Prof. I-Ping Wan, Prof. Chiung-chih Huang, Prof. Huei-ling Lai, Prof. Chien-ching Mo, and Prof. Li-yi Huang, for introducing me to a variety of areas in the field of Linguistics. With their guidance, I began to accumulate the linguistic knowledge from different perspectives. I also appreciate the seniors who are pursuing their doctoral study. They shared with me their experiences of doing research and gave me some suggestions and encouragement: Shu-mei Chiang, Bi-Chan Hu, Yupin Chen, Shih-Min Lin, and Wan-tin Huang. In addition, special thanks to our staff member, Hui-ling Tzeng, for her assistance throughout my academic years in NCCU.

I also wish to thank my classmates and friends: Yu-ting Yang, Kang-Wen Qiu, Yu-Shan Chien, Wei-Chen Chiang, Pi-Chun Chang, Wan-Jyun Luo, Pei-Yun Liao, Ting Huang, Pei-Ling Hung, Wei-Lun Hsieh, Yu-Hong Chang, and Hsiao-Tzu Wang. My school life is spiced with their company. They always support me with great care and encouragement. I really appreciate them.

Moreover, I wish to express my appreciation to Cheng-Yuan Yeh for his support, consideration, and encouragement. He is a good listener and is always being with me whenever I felt helpless.

Finally, I would like to express my deep gratitude to my family for their unconditional love, constant support and encouragement. They give me a full life. My parents, Chin-Chih Hsieh and Li-Jung Chen, always encourage me to do my best. My younger brother, Ming-Tsung, and I shared our different graduate lives with each other. During those days, we also helped and encouraged each other. The successful completion of this thesis is a great achievement for me. My family is the inspiration to me. It is to them that I dedicate this work.
